The Apostle Paul writes this compilation of letters to the First-Century churches he established. He wanted them to know the heart of God and hear his message of truth and love. Customer Reviews

Letters From Heaven By the Apostle Paul is one of a series of books from the Bible translated by Brian Simmons, and appropriately called The Passion Translation. It could also justifiably be called a Revelation Translation. This book is a collection of six of the Pauline Epistles, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, and first and second Timothy. It is difficult to find the words to express how important this work is. During the last week before the Crucifixion of Jesus, there were some Greeks visiting Jerusalem who came to Philip with a request, sir they asked, we would like to see Jesus. John 12:19-20 I feel that the highest recommendation that I can give this book, as well as all of Brian's previous works are that they take me to see Jesus. The anointing upon this translation has opened up new revelations on the Glory, Majesty and Beauty of my Wonderful

Savior, and what it has revealed has added passion, fire and longing to our relationship. Brian sets up each Epistle in Letters From Heaven, with an introduction that attempts to place you in the location and time frame in which it was written. This seems to personalize the Epistle, almost as if you were there when he wrote it. The footnotes are also very helpful for clarification. You can sense the sincerity and determination of the Apostle Paul as he attempts to place onto parchment the wonderful revelations that were revealed unto him. And as you read his words, it seems like he is speaking them directly to you. Listen in Galatians as he talk about Grace, and how it is the Fathers influence and supernatural ability available for those who are in his family.
