

The book was found

Where The Wind Leads: A Refugee Family's Miraculous Story Of Loss, Rescue, And Redemption

Synopsis

Back Cover: "The account of Dr. Chung and his family will inspire you to believe in second chances and miracles and the God who gives them both." -Max Lucado, New York Times best-selling author

My name is Vinh Chung. This is a story that spans two continents, ten decades, and eleven thousand miles. When I was three and a half years old, my family was forced to flee Vietnam in June 1979, a place we had never heard of somewhere in the heartland of America. Several weeks later my family lay half-dead from dehydration in a derelict fishing boat jammed with ninety-three refugees lost in the middle of the South China Sea. We arrived in the United States with nothing but the clothes on our backs and unable to speak a single word of English. Today my family holds twenty-one university degrees. How we got from there to here is quite a story. Where the Wind Leads is the remarkable account of Vinh Chung and his refugee family's daring escape from communist oppression for the chance of a better life in America. It's a story of personal sacrifice, redemption, endurance against almost insurmountable odds, and what it truly means to be American. All author royalties from the sale of this book will go to benefit World Vision.

Flap Copy: Vinh Chung was born in South Vietnam, just eight months after it fell to the communists in 1975. His family was wealthy, controlling a rice-milling empire worth millions; but within months of the communist takeover, the Chungs lost everything and were reduced to abject poverty. Knowing that their children would have no future under the new government, the Chungs decided to flee the country. In 1979, they joined the legendary "boat people" and sailed into the South China Sea, despite knowing that an estimated two hundred thousand of their countrymen had already perished at the hands of brutal pirates and violent seas. Where the Wind Leads follows Vinh Chung and his family on their desperate journey from pre-war Vietnam, through pirate attacks on a lawless sea, to a miraculous rescue and a new home in the unlikely town of Fort Smith, Arkansas. There Vinh struggled against poverty, discrimination, and a bewildering language barrier "yet still managed to graduate from Harvard Medical School. Where the Wind Leads is Vinh's tribute to the courage and sacrifice of his parents, a testimony to his family's faith, and a reminder to people everywhere that the American dream, while still possible, carries with it a greater responsibility.

Book Information

File Size: 10609 KB

Print Length: 341 pages

Simultaneous Device Usage: Up to 5 simultaneous devices, per publisher limits

Publisher: Thomas Nelson (April 29, 2014)

Publication Date: April 29, 2014

Sold by: HarperCollins Publishing

Language: English

ASIN: B00GUTB5U4

Text-to-Speech: Enabled

X-Ray: Enabled

Word Wise: Enabled

Lending: Not Enabled

Enhanced Typesetting: Enabled

Best Sellers Rank: #34,448 Paid in Kindle Store (See Top 100 Paid in Kindle Store) #10 in Books > Biographies & Memoirs > Ethnic & National > Chinese #69 in Kindle Store > Kindle eBooks > Religion & Spirituality > Christian Books & Bibles > Christian Living > Inspirational #404 in Kindle Store > Kindle eBooks > Biographies & Memoirs > Memoirs

Customer Reviews

Review Where the Wind Leads, by Vinh Chung with Tim Downs. Most of the reviews of this book, at and elsewhere, seem to be addressed to a religious audience. The book deserves a wider audience -- among those more inclined toward the secular, toward humanism, toward science, and especially those with an interest in sociology. There is nothing in the book that should put such readers off. On the first page of the Forward, written by Richard Stearns, the President of World Vision U. S., Stearns writes: "All along the way good people, and many good Christians, intervened with a helping hand." A father is frantically running, carrying his ten-year old son, who is near death, to a hospital in a strange land. A woman stops him -- a stranger. She speaks French, which he can't understand. She hands him a few bills and he is able to take a cab to the hospital. Leaving the hospital, again carrying his weak son, another stranger hands him $5, and he is able to take a cab back to the refugee camp. A stranger tucks a $100 bill into the shirt pocket of a three-and-a-half year old refugee boy who is rushing through the San Francisco airport with his family, and that $100 enables the Chung family to buy food in their new home in America. We know nothing about the religious perspectives of these strangers. We do know that they were good, decent, humane. And there is no religious test that people must pass before they may pay taxes to support programs such as food stamps, subsidized housing, and free school lunches -- programs that helped to save the Chung family. Anyone who has an interest in "the boat people" who fled Vietnam after South Vietnam fell to the communists in 1975 will find this book enlightening. Who were they?

While I do love to read for a variety of reasons, there are some books that come along that hit one at a deeper level—these are the books that cut into your bedtime and then into your sleep time as you go over in your head what you just absorbed. Where the Wind Leads was one of those books for me. It's not fiction, or even a biography, but a memoir. For me, it was also a history lesson. Where the Wind Leads tells the story of a family—a well-to-do Chinese family—who happened to live in South Vietnam. Through various set-backs and wars, they had managed to prosper, but the Vietnam War which ended with the takeover by Communism, proved to be the one storm they could not ride out. I grew up during the Vietnam War—living an insulated life as many of us did—we heard of terrible things, of young men killed, of anti-war demonstrations, but we did not hear the story as told by a Vietnamese family. And I'd heard of the "boat people"—those who were sponsored by churches in America, starting over in a new land. But that sentence covers most of what I knew. Vinh Chung tells the story from a different perspective—as one of the youngest children in a large family, and with the memories of his family to help him. He tells the story of the money it took to bribe officials to leave, the fear of boarding a boat that was barely sea-worthy, for an unknown future, of moving slowly through heavy waves with no land in sight, through pirate-infested waters. And then, when the joy of land appeared, to find it patrolled by unhospitable soldiers, because of the thousands of refugees who had already come. This is a story of hardship and hunger and fear and courage, but as you continue to read, you realize that it's also a story of God's grace.

Download to continue reading...

Where the Wind Leads: A Refugee Family's Miraculous Story of Loss, Rescue, and Redemption
Pope Francis: Why He Leads the Way He Leads
The Wind Ensemble and Its Repertoire: Essays on the Fortieth Anniversary of the Eastman Wind Ensemble, Paperback Book (Donald Hunsberger Wind Library)
Karen Kingsbury Redemption Series Collection: Redemption, Remember, Return, Rejoice, Reunion
33 Men: Inside the Miraculous Survival and Dramatic Rescue of the Chilean Miners
The Lost Dogs: Michael Vick's Dogs and Their Tale of Rescue and Redemption
Outcasts United: The Story of a Refugee Soccer Team That Changed a Town
The Lost Boys of Sudan: An American Story of the Refugee Experience
The Pet Loss Companion: Healing Advice from Family Therapists Who Lead Pet Loss Groups
Carry On: A Story of Resilience, Redemption, and an Unlikely Family
Of Beetles and Angels: A Boy's Remarkable Journey from a Refugee Camp to Harvard
The Politics of Suffering: Syria's Palestinian Refugee Camps (Public Cultures of the Middle East and North Africa) The Great Texas Wind Rush: How George Bush, Ann Richards, and a Bunch of Tinkerers Helped the Oil and Gas State Win the Race to Wind Power (Peter T. Flawn Series in Natural Resources) City of Thorns: Nine Lives in the World's Largest Refugee Camp The Little Refugee Wind Energy Basics: A Guide to Small and Micro Wind Systems Solar Wind Nine: Proceedings of the Ninth International Solar Wind Conference: Nantucket, Massachusetts, 5-9 October 1998 (AIP Conference Proceedings / Astronomy and Astrophysics) Energy from Wind: Wind Farming (Next Generation Energy) Planes: Fire & Rescue (Disney Planes: Fire & Rescue) (Little Golden Book) Planes: Fire & Rescue (Disney Planes: Fire & Rescue) (Big Golden Book)

Dmca